SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Six U.S. Army men were wounded in a 27-hour firefight between government and Communist units Saturday and Sunday in which at least 43 enemy guerrillas were killed.

In addition, U.S. advisors said the Communist forces were believed to have carried off about 60 killed and wounded.

Fourteen government troops were killed, and 26, including the Americans, were wounded. There are 18 missing.

Invalids Flee Kokomo Fire

KOKOMO, Ind. (AP)—Firemen and volunteers saved all 36 invalid patients at a nursing home Sunday after a fire broke out in the chapel's quarters.

The chaplain, the Rev. Ambrose Kohne, 62, died of burns suffered in the blaze which sent smoke through the three-story brick Good Samaritan Home.

Rescuers carried some patients piggy-back from the home. Others were removed on mattresses converted to stretchers.

Six nuns, members of the Sisters of St. Joseph order, and three nurses also escaped from the home.

Nikita Fires Blast At Peking

MISKOLC, Hungary (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev charged Sunday that the Chinese Communists were trying to incite the Soviet people against him.

For this purpose, he told a crowd in this Hungarian steel town, they invented accusations against me.

The Chinese also charged that Khrushchev was too concerned with such unrevolutionary things as rising living standards, deprivations of Stalin's time he.

The Soviet premier lashed back Sunday that after the deprivations of Stalin's time he was helping the Soviet people "to begin to live like human beings."

He sneered at continued Chinese devotion to Stalin.

"Whoever loves Stalin can take him, if they like the stench of corpses," he said.

Goulart Says He's Anti-Red

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP)—Joao Goulart, ousted president of Brazil, claimed Sunday his regime and the reforms it fostered were aimed at preventing a Communist takeover of Latin America's largest nation.

Depose by a military-political revolution in Brazil Wednesday, Goulart arrived in Uruguay Saturday to join his wife and two young sons.

Asked about charges by those who led the revolt that his government was becoming Communist, Goulart replied:

"That was the great banner waved against my government and I was highly mystified. The reforms I proposed were exactly for the purpose of restraining foreign ideologies."

Jet Crashes Into Tokyo Homes

TOKYO (AP)—A U.S. Marine Corps jet interceptor plunged into a residential area 20 miles southwest of Tokyo Sunday, killing 4 Japanese and injuring 26 others while flattening 10 homes.

The pilot of the plane, Capt. R. L. Bown of Seattle, Wash., ejected at 5,000 feet and parachuted while the F8U Crusader jet was "heading straight down," a U. S. Navy spokesman said. Bown was bruised in landing on an automobile.

Japanese newspapers immediately demanded to know why the pilot could not have maneuvered the aircraft toward an unpopulated area before ejecting.

A U. S. spokesman said this could not be immediately determined.

Old Soldier MacArthur Fades Away

Quotable General 'Mac'

"I came through and I will return." With these dramatic words, Gen. Douglas MacArthur made a promise that became almost a rallying cry in the dark, early years of World War II.

They were uttered as the general reached Australia on March 17, 1942. He had been sent there from the hopeless defense of the Philippines to take command of Allied Forces in the Southwest Pacific.

In his long career, MacArthur became known for his eloquent, colorful phrasing as well as his military genius. Many of his speeches were delivered without the aid of prepared material.

Here are some of his quotations:

"I have returned. By the grace of Almighty God our forces stand again on Philippine soil consecrated in the blood of our two peoples." (Autumn of 1944, broadcast to Filipinos as reoccupation of Philippines started.)

"Old soldiers never die—they just fade away. And like the old soldier of that ballad, I now close my military career and just fade away, an old soldier."

who tried to do his duty as God gave him the light to see that duty. Goodbye." (April 1951, in speech to Congress in which he announced the end of his active military career. The first sentence was an excerpt from an old army ballad.)

"I know war as few other men now living know it, and nothing to me is more revolting. . . . (In the same address to Congress.)

"At the altar where I first joined the sanctuary of God, I ask that you seek divine guidance for me in the great struggle that lies ahead." (1942, in reply to an Easter greeting from the pastor of the Little Rock Episcopal Church where he was baptized.)

"There can be no compromise. We shall win or we shall die, and to this end I pledge you the full resources of all the mighty power of my country and all the blood of my countrymen." (March, 1942, in addressing a dinner at Parliament House, Canberra, Australia.)

"I started as a soldier and I shall finish as one. The only hope and ambition I have in the world is for victory and for our cause in the war." (1944, in announcing he would not accept the Republican presidential nomination if it were offered him.)

"We have known the bitterness of defeat and the exultation of triumph, and from both we have learned there can be no turning back. We must go forward to preserve in peace what we won in war. . . ." (September 1945, at the formal Japanese surrender on the battleship Missouri.)

"I grew up with the sound of Dixie and the rebel yell ringing in my ears. Dad was on the other side, but he had the good sense to surrender to mother." (April 1951, addressing a celebration held in his and his wife's honor in her home town, Murfreesboro, Tenn.)

"Yours is the profession of arms, the will to win, the sure knowledge that in war there is no substitute for victory, that if you lose the nation will be destroyed, that the very obsession of your public service must be duty, honor, country. (May 1962, on bidding farewell to the Corps of Cadets at West Point Military Academy.)

General MacArthur

General's Spiritual Legacy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur is leaving a spiritual legacy to his son, Arthur — a father's prayer he wrote in the Philippines during the desperate early days of the Pacific war.

According to the general's biographer and confidant, Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, the family repeated this MacArthur credo many times during early morning devotions:

"Build me a son, Lord, who will be strong enough to know when he is weak, and brave enough to face himself when he is afraid, one who will be proud and unbending in honest defeat, and humble and gentle in victory."

"Build me a son whose wishes will not take the place of deeds; a son who will know Thee—and that to know himself is the foundation stone of knowledge."

"Lead him, I pray, not in the path of ease and comfort, but under the stress and spur of difficulties and challenge. Here let him learn to stand up in the storm; here let him learn compassion for those who fail."

"Build me a son whose heart will be clear, whose goal will be high, a son who will master himself before he seeks to master other men, one who will reach into the future, yet never forget the past."

"And after all, these things are his, and I, pray, enough of a sense of humor, so that he may always be serious, yet never take himself too seriously. Give him humility, so that he may always remember the simplicity of true greatness, the open mind of true wisdom, and the meekness of true strength."

"Then I, his father, will dare to whisper, 'I have not lived in vain.'"

War Hero Fights Last Battle At 84

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur—dramatic hero of three wars—slipped out of deep sleep into death Sunday, yielding at last to multiple ailments that finally overwhelmed his stubborn will to live.

Death came at 2:39 p.m. to end a life that spanned 84 years and found glory and honor on the battlefields of France, the South Pacific and Korea.

Death was officially attributed to kidney and liver failure.

form of her husband at Walter Reed Army Medical Center when the doctors finally found it impossible to sustain his heartbeat and his very breath.

The couple's son, Arthur, 29, also was at the bedside. Also present was Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, long-time aide and friend of MacArthur. So ended a 33-day siege in which the general sustained the impact of two emergency operations.

MacArthur Praised By Truman

By The Associated Press
Three former presidents — one who promoted him, one who fired him and one who mourned Sunday the death of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Herbert Hoover, who appointed him chief of staff in 1931, said: "He was one of the world's outstanding military commanders. He was also a statesman for peace. The world is a finer place for his having lived in it."

Harry S. Truman, who relieved him for all far eastern commands during the Korean conflict, said: "He has given of himself with exceptional strength and valor and will be remembered as one of the great military men in our history."

Dwight D. Eisenhower, a major under Chief of Staff MacArthur in the early 1930s, said: "Through a long lifetime of service he earned the admiration and respect of his fellow citizens and the personal devotion of those he led in battle."

ations and myriad other conditions which kept him in critical condition and slow decline.

Immediately after disclosing the death, the Army announced also that the body was to be returned Sunday by highway to New York City where it will lie in state at the 7th Regimental Armory.

Capitol Rotunda
It will be brought back to Washington by train to lie in state in the Capitol rotunda where so recently the body of the assassinated President John F. Kennedy lay.

After that, it will be flown to Norfolk, Va., for burial there in a memorial mausoleum a ready prepared in line with MacArthur's wishes. Funeral services will be at St. Paul's Episcopal church in Norfolk.

Exact hours and days for the funeral ceremonies will be announced later.

Lt. Col. Edward Costello, reading the official bulletin in a halting voice, broke the news to reporters assembled at the public relations office of the medical center, of which the Walter Reed General Hospital is a part. The bulletin said:

"General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, 84, died at 2:39 p.m. EST today at Walter Reed General Hospital, where he had been a patient since March 2.

"Death was attributed to acute renal (kidney) and liver failures which followed his recent surgical operations to relieve common (bile) duct obstruction, esophageal and intestinal obstruction with perforation."

Battles To End
In a sense, the final hours for the old warrior were as the general said the last hours of an old soldier should be. They never die, he said, "they just fade away."

Doctors marveled at what they called MacArthur's "strength and fiber" and his will to live, as he survived the stress of three operations in 24 days, staging what appeared to be a normal recovery from the first surgery March 6, until struck down again March 23.

Prime causes of the coma and death were apparently poisons building up in the blood because of failing liver and kidney functions. At the end, doctors said only a miracle could have saved him.

Everything Possible
They said that they had done everything that medical science could do. If his fight against death showed courage and stamina, then it was out of the same fiber as his life. He graduated at the top of his class from the U.S. Military Academy, won his nation's highest award, the Medal of Honor, and rose to the second highest military rank in the U.S. Army.

He was one of eight generals of the Army since Ulysses S. Grant, and outranked only by General of the Armies John J. Pershing.

MacArthur had forged some of the proudest and most controversial episodes in the nation's military annals during his 52-year Army career which spanned three wars.

Bangor Girl Named 'Miss Poconos'

SWIFTWATER.—A port au-burn haired, brown-eyed sophomore at East Stroudsburg State College walked off with the title of "Miss Poconos" at a beauty pageant sponsored by the Pocono Mountain Vacation Bureau Saturday night at the Pocono Mountain Joint High School in Swiftwater.

The winner, Patricia Lee Falcinelli, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Falcinelli Sr. of Bangor, was crowned queen of the Poconos by Sharon Kaye Ritchie, the 1956 Miss America winner.

The young lady is a 1962 graduate of Easton Area High School, where she had the lead in the annual senior play, sang in the school glee club and was a member of the student council.

At the college Miss Falcinelli is a member of the German Club and the newspaper staff.

She presented a dramatic reading of T. S. Eliot's "The Hollow Men" for the talent portion of the contest. The Bangor beauty will now travel to West Chester to compete in the Miss Pennsylvania contest, a preliminary to the 1964 Miss America pageant.

Two East Stroudsburg Area High School students were chosen runners-up. First runner-up was Karen Anna Sterner, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Sterner of Berwick Heights Rd., East Stroudsburg. Miss Sterner also was named the pageant's Miss Congeniality.

Second runner-up was 18-year-old Nancy Jane Fritz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Fritz of Marshalls Creek.

The three winners will receive cash scholarship awards. In addition, Miss Falcinelli and Miss Sterner were presented with official trophies.

Judging the contest, attended by more than 400 persons, were Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Krandonick of Mt. Nebo Rd., East Stroudsburg; Col. and Mrs. M. J. Reichel from the Tobyhanna Army Depot, and William C. Baldwin, executive secretary of the West Chester Chamber of Commerce.

The pageant was produced and directed by the Barrett Township Junior Women's Club. Serving as personal hostesses were Mrs. Russell Dann, Mrs. Richard Lumsden, Mrs. Vernon Murray Jr., Mrs. Robert Payne and Mrs. Helmi Weiler, all club members.

William Longworth, a radio announcer from Scranton, served as master of ceremonies.

After Losing Command

'War's Object Victory; Not Indecision'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Of the billions of words that have flooded Congress, it's ironic that some of the most memorable came from an old, unemployed soldier who never held an elective office.

On April 19, 1951—a great day in Washington history — Gen. Douglas MacArthur addressed the House and Senate.

Only a week previously he been fired—in the middle of the night — by his commander in chief, President Harry S. Truman. Now MacArthur had come to give his side of the Korean war story.

Who can forget those rolling phrases, those pauses for dramatic effects, those gusts of emotion?

Heroes are old stuff to the nation's capital, and often it's difficult to drum up a quorum. Yet so great was the excitement that day, 12,000 persons waited faithfully at National Airport until past midnight to greet the general as he flew in his plane, "The Bataan."

Thus began an incredible 20-hour day.

Everywhere the 71-year-old MacArthur went, the crowds were simply tremendous. They sprang all over the Washington monument grounds where he spoke briefly. Some 550,000 lined the parade route up his historic Pennsylvania Avenue. (It was the same story in New York the next day, with 7,500,000 out to cheer the deposed hero.)

So many former members of Congress showed up for his Capitol speech—as was their right—that incumbent members could not find seats.

Carefully MacArthur tried to build up his case.

"I address you," MacArthur told the congressmen, "with neither rancor nor bitterness in the fading twilight of life, but with one purpose in mind: to serve my country. (Applause.)

"War's very object is victory, not prolonged indecision. (Applause.) In war there is no substitute for victory."

MacArthur wanted to carry bombing attacks north of the Yalu river. "I called for reinforcements," he said, "but was told they were not forthcoming."

Sensing they might have Harry Truman on the run, Republicans (and perhaps some Democrats) cheered lustily.

MacArthur had said he had no political ambitions, but he acted like a candidate eager not to overlook any votes. He spoke to Congress, at the monument grounds, to the Daughters of the American Revolution and shook hands with members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

When this emotion-filled day ended at last, and MacArthur left for New York, a bemused reporter wrote:

"It was the twilight of the gods."

For Harry Truman it was difficult period.

He had contended it wasn't whether MacArthur's views were right or wrong; rather it was that MacArthur had sought to take his views over the head of the commander-in-chief and hence had to go.

Yet, Truman remained silent all day, the most difficult of chores for a politician, and let the general bask in the sunshine and the glory.

And the next day when Harry Truman went out to open the 1951 baseball season the crowd honored him.

Johnson Orders Flags At Half Staff

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson described Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur on Sunday as "one of America's greatest heroes," and ordered flags flown at half-staff until after his funeral on Saturday.

Johnson said in a statement that he has given instructions that MacArthur "be buried with all of the honors a grateful nation can bestow on a departed hero."

In a proclamation, Johnson said MacArthur "dedicated his entire life to selfless service in the defense of freedom."

The proclamation said, "Outstanding performance of duty and conspicuous leadership marked his career."

As a mark of respect to the memory to MacArthur, Johnson ordered the flag to be flown at half-staff in the District of Columbia and throughout the United States and its territories and possessions, upon all public buildings and grounds and all military posts and naval stations, and on all naval vessels until after the funeral.

Roy Cohn -- Prosecutor Now In Role Of Prosecuted

NEW YORK (AP)—When he walks into Manhattan's Foley Square courthouse, as he has every court day since March 23, Roy Marcus Cohn, once the prosecutor, becomes the prosecuted.

His trial on federal charges of perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice enters its third week Monday before Judge Archie O. Dawson and a jury of two women and 10 men.

Cohn, 37, has ridden high all his life. He has been called brilliant, arrogant and spoiled, and a friend of his family once remarked: "Roy has deserved a spanking since he was a child, but I doubt if he ever got it."

Possible 40 Years
But now Cohn faces the possibility of a real licking. Conviction at his trial would make him liable to as much as 40 years in prison.

Cohn and a lawyer colleague, Murray Gottelman, are accused of tampering with a 1959 grand jury probe in order to save four stock swindlers from indictment. However, they are not on trial for this.

Instead, the government claims the plot came to light and that Cohn and Gottelman then manipulated witnesses and lied to a subsequent 1962 grand jury. It is on their appearance before the 1962 grand jury that the charges of perjury and conspiracy are based.

McCarthy Aide
A decade ago, as a star reporter in the televised McCarthy Army hearings, Cohn's face became one of the best known in the nation. He still has his suave good looks — slick hair, dark complexion, heavy-lidded eyes. He is personable, polite, manicured, a conservative dresser, with a compact 160 pounds on a 5-foot-8 frame.

The only child of a New York State Supreme Court justice, Cohn was born in the Bronx on Feb. 20, 1927. At 16 he earned a finder's fee of $10,000 for lining up the sale of a Bronx residence.

Cohn went through Columbia's undergraduate and law schools in 3½ years. He was only 20 when he graduated.

At 21, Cohn became an assistant U.S. attorney. He had a hand in the prosecution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, the atom spy team who died in the electric chair. Cohn also assisted in the successful prosecution of the nation's top Communist leaders.

In 1952, Cohn went to Washington as special assistant to the U.S. attorney general. A year later he resigned to join forces with Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis., as $11,700-a-year chief counsel to the Senator's permanent subcommittee on investigations.

Sought Red Influences
Cohn and G. David Schine, heir to a hotel empire, teamed up in an 18-day tour of Western Europe to look for Communist influences in America's overseas information program.

Cohn and Schine were ridiculed abroad as "the McCarthy Kid," "Junketeering gun-shoes," and "Keystone Kops" as they moved from city to city investigating the bookshelves in U.S. government libraries.

Then came the Army - Mc-

Carthy hearings in 1954, an outgrowth of Schine's being drafted into the Army. For 36 days, a fascinated public followed the televised confrontation between the Wisconsin senator and the Army brass. Cohn was chief interrogator for McCarthy, fulfilling once again his familiar role of prosecutor.

McCarthy Censured
The hearings ended with McCarthy's censure by the Senate. Cohn resigned from the subcommittee and was succeeded by another young man named Robert F. Kennedy. The two had never gotten on and reportedly had come to blows on one occasion when both worked for McCarthy.

Back in New York practicing law on his own for the first time, Cohn did exceedingly well. Presently, Cohn is a partner in the law firm of Saxe, Bacon & O'Shea.

Working 20 hours a day at bachelor, Cohn has remained a bachelor because, in his words, "Could I ask a girl to lead this kind of life?"

His fortune is estimated at around $2 million, and his income is said to be better than $250,000 a year.

Valued Fields
His law business has led him into the business fields of electronics, defense contracting, transportation, travel insurance, small loans, advertising and the promotion of two of former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson's title fights.

In 1957, Cohn invested in a private hospital project in Las Vegas, Nev. Two of his fellow investors were Samuel S. Garfield, an oil promoter, and Alard Roen, manager of the Desert Inn and Stardust hotels in Las Vegas.

Garfield and Roen, along with Garfield's partner, Irving Pasternak, and Garfield's lawyer, Allen K. Swann, became deeply involved in an intricate financial deal whereby stockholders of the United Dye & Chemical Corp. were defrauded of some $5 million.

In 1959, the quartet was facing federal indictment.

Garfield turned to Cohn and in the words of a subsequent government charge: On or about July and August 1959, Roy M. Cohn and Samuel Garfield entered into a scheme whereby Roy M. Cohn would arrange that Samuel Garfield, Irving Pasternak, Alard Roen and Allen K. Swann would not be named as defendants."

The government charged further that Cohn contracted Gottelman, and that Gottelman got in touch with Chief Asst. U.S. Atty. Moran Robson in pursuit of the scheme to block the indictment of Garfield and his friends.

Eight Indicted
On Aug. 23, 1959, eight men were indicted in the United Dye case — but Garfield, Pasternak, Roen and Swann were not among them.

A year later, however, a superseding federal indictment in the United case did name the four as defendants. All eventually pleaded guilty. Pasternak was sentenced to 2½ years, but has yet to begin serving the time. The others still are awaiting sentence.

On April 2, 1962, another federal grand jury began a separate inquiry into circumstances surrounding the original United Dye indictment—the one that neglected to mention Garfield and his friends.

It was this 1962 grand jury that last Sept. 4 indicted Cohn and Gottelman. They were accused of lying and of coercing others to lie to this grand jury in an attempt to cover up the 1959 manipulations.

Blames Bobby
Cohn protested he was a victim of charges trumped up by his old enemy from the McCarthy days — now U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Cohn claimed that in 1961 a member of Kennedy's staff assured an unidentified newspaperman: "Don't kid yourself. We'll get Roy Cohn sooner or later."

The trial of Cohn and Gottelman began March 23. Garfield testified that he handed Cohn $16,666 in Las Vegas and arranged to have Robson paid $33,334—a total of $50,000—to keep the four stock

State News Roundup

LBJ May Visit Pennsylvania

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson may visit Pennsylvania next week or the week after on a tour of the distressed areas of the Appalachian region. The president said Saturday at his news conference that he wants to go to the Appalachian area but that the exact date and the cities to be visited have not been selected. He said he will be busy the early part of next week, but the Appalachian visit could come the latter part of next week or the following week.

The Appalachian region embraces all of West Virginia, and parts of Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama.

Johnson, who has been invited to look at depressed areas in Pennsylvania by Gov. William W. Scranton, said in Texas last week he planned to tour some poverty-stricken areas of the nation.

Musmanno Hits Fulbright Talk

SUMMIT HILL, Pa. (AP)—State Supreme Court Justice Michael A. Musmanno, candidate for the Democratic Senate nomination, differed Sunday with Sen. William Fulbright's D-Ark. recent comments on U. S. policy towards Communism.

In remarks prepared for the St. Gabriel Lodge ISDA Musmanno said Fulbright said it was only a myth that the Communist bloc is a monolith determined to destroy the free world.

"Monolith means a big stone, and that is exactly what Communism is in Russia," said Musmanno. "Only a heart of stone would deprive the Jewish people of the right to eat their holy bread of Matzah during the Passover season. Freedom of religion is the very soul of democracy and a representative government."

68 Nabbed In Gambling Raid

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Sixty-eight men and women were arrested on gambling charges early Sunday in a police raid in the city's Homewood section.

Police raided the Perry Social Club where they said they found card games in progress.

Seven men were charged with keeping a gambling house and violating state liquor laws. They posted $1,000 bond each.

The others were accused of visiting a gambling place. They put up $10 bond each.

Fire Kills 5 Berwick Kids

BERWICK, Pa. (AP)—Five children died in a fire that levelled their home near here, early Sunday while their father, who was baby sitting with them, tried vainly to reach them.

The victims, all of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Wright Ansbach, were trapped in their beds upstairs.

Ansbach, 30, who stayed at home while his wife and her mother were at the movies, suffered cuts and burns when he tried to reach the children.

Scranton Lauds MacArthur

HARRISBURG (AP)—Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton said Sunday General of the Army Douglas MacArthur was one of "America's bona-fide heroes who now will become one of its legends."

"His death was as his life, valiant and courageous," Scranton said from Rose Sound, Fla., where he is vacationing.

"General MacArthur will be missed by his family, his government, his countrymen and by thousands of others throughout the free world," Scranton added.

Miss Blatt Hits Party Bosses

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP)—Genevieve Blatt, anti-organization candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senate, has said desire for power is eroding the party's strength and appeal in Pennsylvania.

"There was neither democracy nor party responsibility" in the Democratic Policy Committee's endorsement of Supreme Court Justice Michael A. Musmanno, declared Miss Blatt, the state's secretary of internal affairs.

Miss Blatt said endorsement of Musmanno "will hang a millstone around the neck of President Johnson" in Philadelphia's suburban counties in the November election.

Lodge Takes Lead With Republican Voters, Poll Shows

By LOUIS HARRIS
Riding the wave of his New Hampshire primary victory, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge has moved into a clear and decisive lead among Republican voters nationally for the GOP presidential nomination.

What is more, he emerges today as the one Republican with the potential of giving President Johnson a tough run in November. Contrary to the belief of those who wrote off his write-in victory in New Hampshire as a regional win, Lodge demonstrates remarkable drawing power in most sections of the country.

A survey of a national cross-section among Republican voters shows this line-up of preference compared with that of two months ago:

Total Republicans		April		Feb.
		Per Cent	Per Cent	Per Cent	Per Cent
Lodge	41	44	28	44	28
Nixon	28	44	28	44	28
Goldwater	10	17	10	17	10

Romney	3	5	3	5	3
Scranton	2	1	2	1	2
Mrs. Smith	1	1	1	1	1
None or not sure	9	8	9	8	9

(Note: X—Not asked in Feb.)
Before New Hampshire, former Vice President Richard Nixon dominated the GOP field. Now, in the highly volatile GOP sweepstakes, Lodge has dramatically displaced Nixon as the leading candidate among rank and file Republicans. He leads in every region of the country.

The post-New Hampshire slip-page for both Senator Goldwater and Governor Rockefeller has been drastic. At present, the candidacy of Gov. William Scranton shows little sign of life among Republican voters.

When matched against President Johnson among all types of voters, Ambassador Lodge appears to be the only Republican currently within striking distance of the White House. The pairings of the five leading Republicans against President Johnson:

GOP Leader Says Scranton Must Decide

HARRISBURG (AP)—An official of the Republican National Committee rates Gov. Scranton high as a prospective candidate for president, but feels he must decide soon whether to run.

Fred Scribner, general counsel of the national organization, put it this way for some 200 state Republican candidates attending a "campaign school" Saturday sponsored by the state GOP committee:

"I think the longer he waits, the more difficult the task becomes for his nomination."

Scribner said Scranton's position in GOP presidential preference polls has "improved substantially" in the last six weeks. Scranton "has done better than anyone else except (Ambassador Henry Cabot) Lodge," he commented.

Scribner's formal remarks were directed to campaign techniques and campaign financing, but much of the question-and-answer period dealt with Scranton's potential as the party's presidential nominee.

Scranton has said he would accept a "sincere and honest" offer, but just as vigorously stated that he will not become an active candidate.

Scribner told the 200 in attendance that the GOP presidential candidate would be "well-tested" and "well-known" by campaign time.

Asked if these standards applied to the governor, Scribner replied:

"As of this moment, well-tested, yes, well-known, no."

But he added: "He is going to be well-tested and well-known by convention time if nominated."

Lodge is the only Republican in three returns who cuts Lyndon Johnson's handsome majorities below the 60% mark. Nixon appears to be holding steady at the 38% level; Scranton has moved up in recent months from 33 to 35%; Goldwater has slipped from 33 to 31%; Rockefeller has remained in the rear at 29%.

Most significant in making a Johnson-Lodge race potentially close is a breakdown of the vote by regions:

Lodge Vs. Johnson By Region (Undecided Vote Out)		Per Cent
		Per Cent	Per Cent
NATION-WIDE	58	42
East	52	48
Midwest	56	44

South	68	32
Far West	53	47

In three out of four regions of the country, Lodge now shows possibilities for overtaking Mr. Johnson. The Democratic President wins nearly half of this current lead over Lodge from the South alone, and this reading has been taken, it should be pointed out, before the civil rights bill reaches a showdown.

Mr. Lodge runs strongest in status with a high proportion of votes in the electoral college. If these trends continue, the political phenomenon of Henry Cabot Lodge might yet turn the 1964 Presidential election into a real contest after all.

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain—without surgery.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Morse Hits Scranton As 'Double-Talker'

HARRISBURG (UPI)—Gov. William W. Scranton was called a double-talker over the weekend with a "phony disinterest" in seeking the presidency of the United States.

The accusations came from Democratic State Chairman Otis B. Morse who said the governor's claims that he does not want the Republican presidential nomination aren't fooling anyone.

"The time has come for Mr. Scranton . . . to stop playing his tortured word game with the public," Morse said. "The time has come for him to tell the people in simple direct language: is he going to be a fulltime governor of Pennsylvania or is he going to attempt to advance his candidacy for higher office openly without all the behind-the-scenes maneuvering the public has been viewing for much too long."

"Split-Level Approach"

Charging the governor with using a "split-level approach,"

Scranton Blamed For Orchestra's Saratoga Choice

Genevieve Blatt, independent candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senate, accused the Scranton administration of "muzzling a good chance to establish a cultural center in Pennsylvania."

The recently announced plans for the Philadelphia Orchestra to help establish a performing arts center in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., "is a sad commentary on the lack of vision in our own State Capitol," declared Miss Blatt, State Secretary of Internal Affairs.

"The Governor and his cabinet have been busy advertising how great Pennsylvania is, but they have let New York State steal a great opportunity right out from under their noses," she said.

"While our State government is still half-heartedly dicker over the possibilities of establishing a cultural center in the Poconos, New York State has already committed itself to put up $600,000 to attract one of our great Pennsylvania orchestras away from our borders."

Wanton Balis, president of the Philadelphia Orchestra Association, on Thursday announced the orchestra hopes to play concerts in the planned June, 1966, Pocono Festival of Music to be held at Shawnee-on-Delaware.

the chairman referred to a recent secret meeting of a group of public relations officials from giant corporations as "one more example of the calculated strategy of 'non-candidate' Scranton in his bid for a Republican nomination to a higher office."

"The single purpose of a March 18 meeting of corporate image-makers was to turn their attention from selling steel, oil, toothpaste and biscuits to that of selling William W. Scranton to the Republican rank-and-file," Morse said.

"Favorite Ball"

"Using the governor's favorite ball, industrial development for Pennsylvania, the public relations experts soon knew why they had been summoned to Harrisburg," Morse continued. "They were to offer advice and help on how best to advance the presidential ambitions of Gov. Scranton."

"It is insulting to Pennsylvanians — and frankly monotonous — to be told over and over by Gov. Scranton that he is not interested in seeking the Republican nomination and that he is discouraging all efforts toward that goal."

"This split-level approach . . . makes it difficult on the surface to determine whether the Scranton aides are really acting without his knowledge or whether it's all part of Scranton's political maneuvering," Morse said.

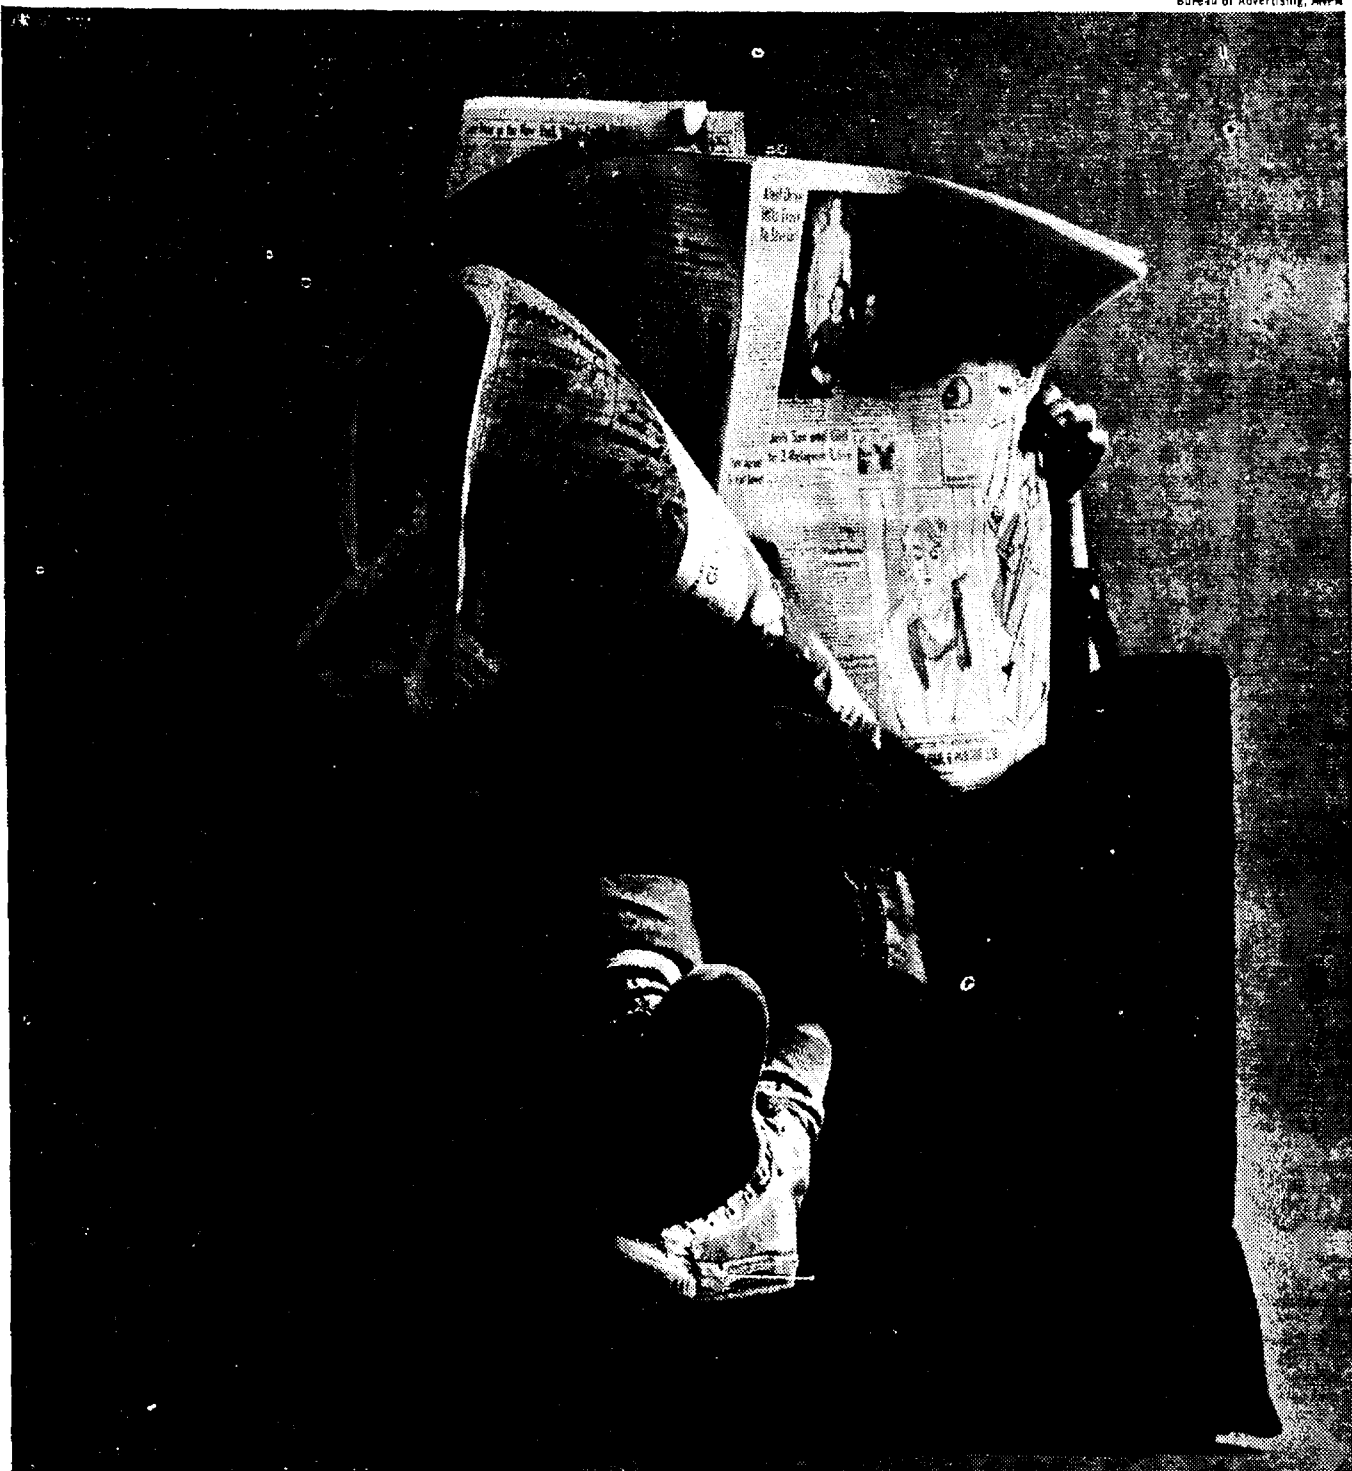

Secret Session Comes To Light

HARRISBURG (AP)—A meeting in Harrisburg last month between top corporation executives of New York and Republican leaders of Pennsylvania booming Gov. William W. Scranton for president came to light recently.

Republican State Chairman Craig Truax confirmed published reports that such a meeting had been held. He denied making an outright request for support of Gov. Scranton.

Scranton has declined to commit himself beyond saying he would accept an "honest and sincere draft," should it develop at the Republican convention in San Francisco. Nevertheless, he has figured prominently in the national speculation and various groups are working in his behalf. Scranton has said repeatedly he was not sponsoring any of these efforts.

The Harrisburg meeting was held prior to Gov. Scranton's departure March 23 for a Florida vacation.

The Daily Record

Every Litterbit Hurts

It is time for a spring campaign to clean up roadside rests, like the one above near Porter's Lake on Rt. 402 in Pike County, and other highways, streets and fields in the Pocono Mountains.

People who deliberately dump household garbage and trash, as this picture shows, should be pursued and prosecuted.

Such an annual campaign is good and necessary for the Pocono Mountain resort industry, which depends upon the beauty and clean atmosphere of this area to attract visitors and tourists.

April and May are good months to join in Governor William Scranton's Tourist Preparation Program by holding a Pocono Mountain Spring Cleaning Campaign.

The Boroughs of Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg already do their part with special spring trash collections May 4 and 5 in Stroudsburg and May 6, 7 and 8 in East Stroudsburg.

Other boroughs and townships in Monroe and Pike County tourist areas should consider having similar trash collections.

Perhaps the various Boy Scout troops of the Pocono Mountain area could hold a poster contest.

The Boy Scout troop which tears down the most election campaign posters still tacked up on trees and telephone poles would win The Daily Record Spring Cleaning Campaign prize.

We should all take pride and personal interest in the appearance, not only of our own back yards, but of all the Pocono Mountains. It's time for a Pocono Mountain Spring Cleaning Campaign.

The Pennsylvania Story

Impeachment Suggestion

By Mason Denison
HARRISBURG — The stuff of which campaign material is made was rather clearly and somewhat startlingly defined on Capitol Hill the other day when a member of the Senate suggested that consideration might be given to the initiation of impeachment proceedings against Governor Scranton.

That's a rather serious "suggestion" to be made by a (theoretically) responsible member of the legislative branch (which does indeed have the constitutional power and authority to impeach the chief executive).

The impeachment suggestion brewed from the appearance of State Police on the floor of the House of Representatives during the latter part of last month at the peak of the acrimonious debate, huff and vote on the Administration's unemployment compensation revision program.

The contention of Senator William Mullin — Philadelphia Democrat — in his impeachment mumble seemed to center around the allegation that Governor Scranton had ordered State Police into the legislative chamber, this action supposed to somehow cow anti-administration Democratic House members into voting "for" the UC revision legislation!

It isn't crystal clear at this point just who requested the presence of State Police — but certainly it did no particular harm as a simple "preparedness" measure when it was most uncertain as to just what might develop, not from the standpoint of the lawmakers, but from the loaded galleries in the House of Representatives!

It would seem that the ruckus that ensued, including the peak when members of the Democratic House bloc stalked off the floor in a huff and pout and childishly refused to adhere to their responsibility to vote on an issue, more than adequately warranted taking the precautionary measure from a simple we-don't-know-what-will-happen-next standpoint alone!

But here are some salient facts well worth noting: Impeachment proceedings do not start in the Senate — they have to originate in the House itself, which seemingly would place Senator Mullin somewhat out of place in his squawk to begin with.

Actually, sole power of impeachment rests with the House of Representatives, although the impeachment is tried by the Senate.

(It's been more than a hundred years since an impeachment proceeding of any kind was actually carried out — and that was in 1826 against a district judge. However, petitions for impeachment have been presented much more recently, the last having been in 1960 against the District Attorney of Philadelphia, which incidentally was refused.)

Importantly, it requires not a majority vote to get an impeachment conviction but rather a two-thirds vote of the Senate once the "trial" moves to that chamber.

To initiate the impeachment move in the House, a petition must be presented, which is then referred to either a standing House committee or a special committee.

Under these circumstances, any impeachment proposal by an anti-administration Democratic lawmaker would have about as much chance as an ice cube in an atom explosion. In the first place the petition would never get out of committee, and if it did in the present case, it is inconceivable that anything approaching a two-thirds vote could be mustered in the Senate.

Certainly Senator Mullin knew all this at the time of this "suggestion" — either that or he would do well to attend a legislative school.

Under such circumstances therefore, his "suggestion" could only have an its purpose a hope — for political malignment of the Governor, whose "achievements" in spite of Democratic opposition, have literally and figuratively outraged donkey riders of the Keystone State, with perhaps the galling pinnacle being reached in Mr. Scranton's continual mention for the Presidency.

Impeachment has its place, to be sure — but not remotely in a campaign sense, the only connotation that can be deducted in this hot campaign year from the Senator's remarks.

The Allen-Scott Report

African Boycott

Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — The State Department is spending more time and energy discouraging U.S. and foreign shippers from exporting goods to South Africa than to Cuba.

Authorities led by Secretary of State Rusk and Undersecretary Averell Harriman are privately passing the word to airlines and shipping firms to abide by the economic sanctions being imposed by African countries against the Johannesburg government.

In sharp contrast, Rusk and Harriman are supporting a policy whereby the U.S. provides navigational help and vital weather information to Soviet jet transports flying strategic cargo and arms to Cuba non-stop from Russia.

The unannounced State Department boycott against South Africa is in addition to the announced policy of the Johnson administration barring arms shipments to the all-white regime.

Authority for this boycott is spelled out in a highly classified National Security Council policy paper on South Africa, which is being circulated at the highest government level on a "need to know" basis.

Drafted by the State Department's Policy Planning Council, the new NSC paper is the first major policy on Africa approved by President Johnson since he took over last November following President Kennedy's assassination.

White House insiders report that the policy paper was rushed through the Security Council at "lightning speed" at the urging of Secretaries Rusk and Harriman on the ground that U.S. diplomats needed guide-lines to deal with possible new explosive events in Africa.

Harriman, a presidential troubleshooter, is now touring Africa briefing U.S. diplomats and foreign governments on the new policy, despite the fact that it has never been publicized in the U.S.

One key State Department official, after reading the top-secret document, reported the policy as so anti-South Africa that it puts the U.S. on the side of the African nations, Russia and Communist China in their efforts to topple that government.

Keeping Hands Off — The NSC paper also advocates a "hands off" policy on Zanzibar, the first nation to fall into the Soviet orbit since President Johnson took office. It bars the use of U.S. military force to recover the valuable space tracking equipment on the island or to keep Soviet military technicians from making the island a military base similar to Cuba.

Defense Intelligence Agency warnings reveal that the Kremlin is planning to install SA-2 anti-aircraft missiles similar to those given Castro.

While the new "African policy paper" stresses that the recent Soviet arms agreement with Somalia has dangerously altered the strategic balance in East Africa, it offers no concrete U.S. counter-measures to stem this tide.

The NSC paper, in effect, backs the Angolan and Mozambique liberation movements by advocating a policy of self-determination in those strife-torn Portuguese territories. It provides no U.S. support for Portugal, a member of NATO, in its life-and-death struggle against these liberation movements, which are heavily infested with Communists.

One State Department expert, vigorously opposed to the new policy, warns that it will pave the way for the eventual take-over of all Africa by Russia and the Chinese Communists.

Already, the policy has blocked U.S. efforts to keep the new regime in Zanzibar from ousting all the moderates in that government. To accomplish this, the pro-Reds exiled their opponents, while U.S. officials sat on the sidelines because of the new policy.

Breaking Political Ties — Former President Dwight Eisenhower has made a final break with former Argiculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson.

In a series of letters to members of Congress, Eisenhower has thanked them for denouncing former political associates of his, including Benson, who are members of the John Birch Society.

The particular choice of treatment is individually made by the physician according to the specific needs of his allergic patient.

Effort To Unravel Intensive studies are in progress in an effort to unravel the mysterious complexities of mild and severe allergic responses.

Dear Abby

It Will Never Do, Lady

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: While sitting in my dentist's outer office yesterday, a smartly dressed woman came in with her daughter, who appeared to be four or five years old. The mother wore a wool suit and a full-length coat with a fur collar, as it was exceptionally cold and windy for this time of year. The child wore a short organza dress, anklets and a short jacket. She looked like a little doll, but her lips were blue and quivering and she was sniffing. I wanted to say something to the mother for disregarding the child's health and comfort for the sake of beauty. After my opportunity had passed I berated myself for not having said something. I could hardly sleep last night for worrying about that poor child. Should I call the dentist's nurse and ask her who the woman was, and write her an anonymous note? Maybe seeing it in writing would bring her to her senses?

COULDN'T SLEEP

DEAR COULDN'T: No. If you start letting this kind of other people's business bother you, you will NEVER get any sleep.

DEAR ABBY: What a coincidence! My husband was stationed at Camp McCoy for a short time during World War II, and HE had "HERB" tattooed on him. But we were married at the time, and I am quite sure nobody ever saw HIS "HERB."

HERE'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: Will you please describe the proper way to hold a fork while cutting with the knife? My husband holds his like a catapult. Perpendicular, at right angles to his plate. Our grown children have mentioned it to me, but I hate to hurt his feelings. I've searched through all the etiquette books, hoping to find a picture, but to no avail. Shouldn't somebody tell him? Your answer will probably be, "Just be thankful you have a husband with two good arms, and don't be ashamed of him as long as he brings home the pay check."

"MRS."

DEAR MRS.: Not this time, friend. It is surprising how many well-mannered people with most of the social graces lack this one. Yes, somebody should tell him. Allow me? The fork should be held with all the fingers gently wrapped around it, except the index finger and thumb, which should hold it down near the neck at an angle of 45 degrees or less.

CONFIDENTIAL TO D. M. ON ALLEN STREET: Yes, there is help for you. Please send me your address, complete with city and state, and I will wire my reply at once.

Allergies Blossom With Spring

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

The loveliness of spring can be marred for many people because allergies, too, begin to "blossom" with the first buds.

The word "allergy" has been used so frequently, and even promiscuously, that its real meaning may not be clearly understood.

Allergy is the unusual reaction of the body tissues in some people who are exposed to usual or unusual substances. This exposure may be to foods, drugs, inhalants, contactants or physical agents like heat and cold.

The substance that an allergic individual is sensitive to is called an allergen.

Complicated Reactions The biological effects of allergens and the reactions they produce are highly complicated. For the allergic patient, it is sufficient to know that allergy can show itself as hay fever, asthma, intestinal disturbances, skin hives and in other diffuse ways.

Hay fever is a seasonal form of allergy produced by wind-borne pollen. Hay fever is the general term that applies to reactions to plants and trees that flourish in the spring, the summer and the fall. It does not mean sensitivity to "hay," and it is not necessarily associated with fever.

Tree Pollen Spring allergies are most commonly caused by the tree pollen of maples, elms, oaks and birches.

The symptoms of nasal congestion, running nose, repeated bouts of sneezing and itching eyes are so characteristic that the patient almost always knows his trouble.

Sometimes it is difficult to determine the exact offending allergen. Doctors often obtain clues simply from the time of year in which attacks occur.

Skin testing is useful in determining allergens. A variety of techniques is available, each carefully chosen for its special advantages.

When a particular allergen is discovered, the patient can be desensitized in one of three ways by small, repeated injections. The in-season method is used while the patient is having hay fever symptoms.

Before The Onset The pre-season method of desensitization starts about eight weeks before the expected time of the onset of symptoms.

The perennial method consists of an all-year-round desensitization to known offending pollens or other allergens.

Treatment for "hay fever" allergies also includes the use of antihistamines and, in unusual cases, the cortisones.

The particular choice of treatment is individually made by the physician according to the specific needs of his allergic patient.

Effort To Unravel Intensive studies are in progress in an effort to unravel the mysterious complexities of mild and severe allergic responses.

LBJ Speeding?

WASHINGTON — A controversy over whether President Lyndon B. Johnson is a speed demon who makes a bum out of Texas' top posted speed limit of 70 miles an hour is raging in the White House.

Arrayed on one side are news correspondents who accompany the President when he goes home to the ranch. They aver that he barrels along bumpy backroads at 80 to 85 miles an hour, with one hand on the wheel, either talking over his shoulder or into a telephone.

On the other side are Mr. Johnson and members of his staff. They agree unanimously that the President observes all posted speeds.

The controversy was given another airing at Presidential Press Secretary George E. Reedy's news briefing the other day. One correspondent suggested diffidently that it might be safer for Mr. Johnson to hold it down to 70 when he takes the wheel. Mr. Reedy retorted that the President never exceeds the speed limit "despite the temptation of the open Texas highways."

A very neat piece of press-and-take followed. The reporter said he had tried to keep up with the President on several occasions and had thereby acquired certain knowledge of Presidential speeds. Mr. Reedy retorted with this beautiful bit of circumlocution:

"I can only assume responsibility for facts in my knowledge. I cannot assume responsibility for facts in your knowledge."

This was generally translated by White House interpreters as:

"I don't know anything about it — and I don't want to know anything about it."

This ended the press briefing, as well it should. When the reporters got beyond earshot of Mr. Reedy they began reminiscing about hairbreadth experiences while tailing the President in Texas.

One recalled a hitherto unpublished adventure. He was doing 80, not far back of the President's car, when Mr. Johnson suddenly pushed on the brakes and brought his big, luxurious car to a screeching halt. The correspondent managed to stop his own car in time.

The President jumped out of his car, followed by Rufus Youngblood, the Secret Service agent who has accompanied him ever since Youngblood shielded LBJ's body with his own when President Kennedy was slain. Rufus whipped out his gun and fired three shots at a rattlesnake. Whether he hit it could not be established because President Johnson finished off the serpent with a brick.

For reasons too morbid to contemplate, the distinguished journalist claimed the corpse of the bashed snake. He wanted to deposit the trophy in his car, but his traveling companions howled that they weren't riding with any rattlesnake, no matter how defunct. The journalist compromised by slinging his souvenir over a fence.

When the Presidential motorcade got back to the ranch, LBJ inquired what had become of the rattler. The snake fancier replied:

"It fell off when we were following you at 80 miles an hour."

The reporter quoted the President as denying that he was doing 80. Another newspaperman stoutly corroborated the Chief Executive.

"That's true," declared the gallant defender. "He was not doing 80. He was doing 85."

Other White House correspondents rose to the defense of President Johnson too. They declared that his Texas speeds are no worse than President Eisenhower's in a chauffeured limousine between the White House and his Gettysburg, Pa., farm, on roads posted at 50 and 60.

The White House speed controversy, disturbing as it may seem, has left the rest of Washington tranquil. This is because the President has let it be known that he intends to do no driving in the capital or its environs.

He has confided to intimates that he has too much on his mind nowadays for driving in crowded metropolitan traffic.

Off The Record:

—By BOB CLARK

Bangor's Class Will Tell

Bangor was primarily a State Bell town. For years the borough was known from coast to coast for its production of material that graced homes, walls of school rooms and sidewalks.

Today, however, it is another story. Bangor, like many other communities of its size, is striving to keep alive.

Basically the ingredients are there. But modern substitutes for state have forced the city fathers to seek newer industries to up the economy.

Bangor's councilmen and Mayor and Lions club and Chamber of Commerce — have not been sitting on their tails waiting for the silver lining. They've been making improvements and setting the stage for potential plants.

It hasn't been easy, but Bangorians are beginning to see the sun rise, if not in the west, and east.

Its new sewage plant, water storage increase and the picturesque high school at Mt. Bethel are impressive markers showing Bangor is on the move.

It is a community effort in Bangor. Before it was just a few taking part in the resurgence. Now the extra effort is brushing off on many.

Confidence erupts from the public office holders. More than a few met stone walls with their modern viewpoints. Today, though, support is coming in from all wards in the borough.

Perhaps it will be years before the full results will be known. Perhaps, too, men and women who are giving time and energy to free the borough of a "dying" attitude will bow to the stonewall that appears evident many times.

But there will be those who have faith in Bangor and its future.

Bangor reminds us of a coal town plight, except for one big point — the State Bell residents are not taking their bow to modern times sitting down.

They are doing something about it no matter what the odds appear against them.

As the old professional ball-player said, "Class will tell." Bangor feels this way, too.

According to L. V. Mormon & Son, 326 Main St., in Stroudsburg, families planning to do some redecorating or remodeling on a limited budget will find a helping hand in the new low cost Armstrong Rotovinyls. Armstrong rotovinyls are made to give several years of satisfactory service and are designed to be loose-laid on the floor without the use of adhesives. Any home handy man can put a rotovinyl floor covering in place in a matter of minutes. This loose-lay feature, coupled with the low cost makes rotovinyl especially ideal for family rooms, play rooms, bedrooms. They are especially handy for people whose work makes it necessary for them to move from one place to another from time to time. You merely roll up your rotovinyl rug and take it along.

Rotovinyls are available in a wide variety of designs including floral effects, geometric designs, carpet-like effects, representations of inlaid wood, and likenesses of stones and pebbles. Some of the very newest effects feature an embossed or textured surface. This rich, natural effect adds luxurious dimension to budget decorating. L. V. Mormon & Son have between 25 to 30 of these patterns on hand at all times and in 6'-9'-12' widths.

The process used in printing rotovinyls makes possible the reproduction of any design the eye can see. Since the principle of rotovinyl printing involves photographic reproduction, the result is a pattern with infinite detail. In the case of one rotovinyl material, Vinyl Accolon, an exclusive printing technique has been developed to increase the detail of the pattern and achieve a much richer and more realistic design. The design is printed on felt for strength and then sealed under several layers of clear vinyl. The vinyl forms a glossy, smooth surface that is durable and easy to swish clean.

Ladies Want Final Day In Design

The ladies are taking over when it comes to designing their kitchens. Too many architects, the feminine contingent claim, don't pay enough attention to the little things which make a kitchen comfortable to work in.

One pet peeve is the matter of counter height in the baking center. Most counters are arbitrarily set at 36 inches, but this is too high for the woman who uses her baking center and who would prefer to have it low enough to be comfortable when she is working on pies and other pastries.

Another advantage of the lower counter is that the lady can sit on a low stool and do much of her work while seated. Also, this can be used as a homemaker's desk when not used as a baking center.

These counter heights are easily adjusted to the desired distance above the floor when they are built of wood, because generally cabinets are custom built to fit the kitchen and it is easy for a home owner to designate any special features she wishes included.

One of the most popular woods being used in kitchens today is west coast hemlock, a beautiful champagne toned wood which is extra hard and wear resistant. Another wood which takes lots of knocks and has its own lovely reddish-gold color is Douglas fir. These woods can be finished natural with wear-resistant clear plastics to give the kitchen a charm and warmth not obtainable in any other material.

A STRIKINGLY authentic reproduction of an Early American braided rug is obtained in one of the newest designs in Vinyl Accolon, rotovinyl floor covering now available in a variety of patterns at L. V. Mormon & Son, 326 Main St. Ideal for family rooms and children's play areas, rotovinyl costs only about $25 for a ten foot by 15 foot room. Rotovinyls are intended as coverings for floors, not as permanent floors themselves, and can be unrolled and placed in a room in a matter of minutes.

The program has been prepared by Mrs. Elly Peterson, assistant chairman of the national committee. The conference is being sponsored by the women's division of the national committee.

The Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women has a suite at the Sheraton Park Hotel during the conference. Pennsylvania delegates and their friends from other states will be welcomed.

Besides warm hospitality, guests of the state council will enjoy an attractive exhibition promoting the industrial, scenic, and vacation advantages available in the Keystone state.

Monroe Council delegate, Mrs. Shukaitis, will be a guest of Mrs. Samuel L. Veitch, Pennsylvania council president, at a party on April 8, at 5:30 p.m.

Thursday afternoon Senator Hugh Scott, candidate for reelection, will entertain his Pennsylvania constituents at a reception in the conference room of the senate, from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Mrs. Shukaitis will have an opportunity to see this famous room in the senate of the United States and a chance to talk with Senator Scott.

She will also attend the conference banquet Thursday night.

Handford Cleveland, alternate delegate to the GOP national convention.

Also Leo W. McCormick, candidate for congress, and J. Russell Eshbach, who is seeking reelection to the state assembly from Pike County.

The club is hoping as many people as possible will attend the meeting. This will be the only time the candidates will be present at a meeting before the April 28 primary election.

The executive board will meet at 1:30 p.m. at the hotel.

University Women Seek Used Books For Fair

Stroudsburg — Local homemakers tackling Spring housecleaning may get an assist from the Book Fair committee of the American Assn. of University Women.

Mrs. William Wells and Mrs. Sidney Newcomb will be glad to call and cart away any books which may be crowding shelves or attics.

The Book Fair is an annual event sponsored by the local branch with the proceeds to be divided between local grants-in-aid and International Fellowship Grants for advanced studies.

From the Book Fair, the branch hopes to distribute $600 in grants-in-aid to help one girl graduating from each of the four county high schools in her college expenses.

The National Fellowship Fund of AAUW is used to help women on advanced study abroad as well as outstanding foreign women scholars who want to study in this country.

Mrs. David Mazer and Mrs. Wells are co-chairmen of the Book Fair which will be held this Summer.

Popular types of books which are in demand are children's books, garden books, text and reference books, dictionaries, encyclopedias, fiction and books on languages. Sheet music and records and albums are also popular.

A telephone call to either Mrs. Wells or Mrs. Newcomb can arrange for pick-up.

The girls represent the six counties of the council beginning in Susquehanna County at the New York State line and continuing through Wayne, Wyoming, part of Pike, Lackawanna and Monroe.

Girl Scouts in District V of the council sold 25,524 boxes of cookies. This district, which covers Monroe County, is comprised of three neighborhoods and the girls in each neighborhood sold cookies as follows: 316 girls in 16 troops of the Mountain Neighborhood sold 7,440 boxes; 292 girls in 17 troops of the East Stroudsburg Neighborhood sold 6,876 boxes and 429 girls in 22 troops in the Stroudsburg Neighborhood sold 11,208 boxes.

The girls received 5 cents a box for every box they sold.

Each girl will be entitled to use this money for a personal camping experience such as day camping at Camp Treble, near Shawnee on the Delaware, or a stay at the council's established camp, Camp Archibald, in Susquehanna County.

If she does not wish to participate in camping, the money she has earned will revert to the troop. Members of the troop will then decide how this money will be used.

Cookie Money Uses — The money from this year's sale will be used in a variety of ways. Troop Cookie money can be used for hikes, cookouts, troop camping, registrations, crafts, cooking equipment, insurance, service projects, or contributions to the Monroe Community Chest or council campaigns.

However, it should never be used for uniforms or personal equipment. These items are the girls' responsibility.

The council's share of the cookie profit this year will amount to over $46,000. It will be used to make possible good camp program at the council's camps—day, established or troop.

It will be used to develop and maintain present campsites and to obtain the new dock at the lake front, and during this past year, cookie income has made it possible to erect the new barn which is used for storage and maintenance operation.

In addition, other major repairs and remodeling have been done such as re-casing the well, renovating the infirmary, remodeling the troop house in the Meadows Unit at Camp Archibald, wiring two units and relocating and establishing Maples and Appenook Units at the established camp.

Cookie money will also be used for some of the council's operating system.

The council is a member agency of the Lackawanna United Fund and the Monroe County Community Chest.

These two organizations provide approximately $34,000 of the council's $135,000 budget. Another $16,190 is to be raised through independent council campaigns in counties where there are no funds or chests.

The balance of the operating budget is secured through camping income and use of cookie money. By agreement, one third of cookie sale profit is transferred to the operating budget of the council.

Girls Fund Raising

The cookie sale is the only council fund raising project conducted by the girls. It gives the girls an opportunity to gain experience in meeting people, selling, handling money, and in relating the sale to Girl Scout program.

The girls understand their responsibility and know when they sell cookies they are helping their troops financially.

For many girls, camping experience would be impossible without the money they earn from the cookie sale, for some of the girls sell as high as three hundred boxes of cookies. These Scouts look forward to the sale each year for they realize this means their camping opportunity—day, troop or established.

Lodge And Camp Site

In the past few years the cookie money has provided a lodge and camp site at Camp Laurel, Elmhurst, three new cabins in the Brownie Unit at Camp Archibald, a drainage system in Samoset and Meadows Units, complete new sanitation units through out the entire camp, new kitchen equipment including the dishwasher to facilitate duties incurred by 250 campers each session at established camp, the new dock at the lake front, and during this past year, cookie income has made it possible to erect the new barn which is used for storage and maintenance operation.

Credit Card Gimmick

DEAR CY:

The credit card holder is being played for a sucker! I have two credit cards from large organizations. With my monthly bills, I get all sorts of literature asking me to buy merchandise. Premiums, you might say. Today, affairs hit a new low. With no bill attached, I got a mailing from a major credit card firm (their name was on the envelope) offering to sell me insurance from some insurance company. I resent this. When I gave these firms my credit card business, no mention was made of flooding me with offers to buy merchandise. Am I nuts or just an honest sucker?

MR. TRIPPLE

DEAR MR. TRIPPLE:

Credit card companies, and thousands of others, are misconstructing the meaning of a customer's credit. For profits. No one resents envelope stuffers, offering merchandise for sale, with retail store bills. It's part of the package originally purchased. But... offers to sell merchandise or other services through a credit card organization... is another matter. Frankly, I don't want my banker selling me luggage, toothpicks, or insurance.

Travelers' checks fit his line, so O.K. Credit card companies are playing the charge-it mania so far, they will discover a boomerang in their computers. Many purveyors of goods and services merely record credit card numbers and put through their own invoices. Thus the

Historical Society Purchases Schoolhouse For Museum

STROUDSBURG — Dr. Alfred D. Sunberg, president of the Monroe County Historical Society, announced on Saturday that the Society had purchased the former Bell School, located on the Cherry Valley Road near Stormville.

"It is the purpose of the society," Dr. Sunberg said, "to restore this historic structure and to create one of the finest one-room school museums in Pennsylvania."

"As Monroe County grows, it is essential that the Historical Society grow in both facilities and programs accordingly and serve the needs and interests of both our own citizens and those who visit the Pocono Mountains region."

"The Bell School Museum will be an important addition to the historic sites of Monroe County and we hope to have the co-operation of those many fine citizens of our community who obtained the fundamentals of their education in this and similar one-room schools."

"We are most anxious to hear from persons who attended this particular school. We hope they will be able to help us recreate the setting of this lovely historic structure."

The Bell School was built in 1871 or 1872. It was one of the early brick school buildings in Hamilton Township and also one of the first schools in this area to have a bell on top of it.

It served as an elementary school for approximately 80 years.

A committee composed of Mrs. Andrew Kelsner, chairman, C. Edward DePuy, Mrs. Loring Cramer, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hahn were in charge of negotiations for the purchase of the building.

It was owned by Robert Kellow of Stanhope, N.J., and was purchased for $50.

MacArthur Leaves Phillipines; But Returns

EDITOR'S NOTE — Watson Sims, news editor of Associated Press World Services, was a radio man on one of the torpedo boats which evacuated Gen. Douglas MacArthur from the Phillipines in March 1942. In the following article he tells of an incident which nearly ended the general's career before he began the U.S. march to victory in the Pacific.

By WATSON SIMS
NEW YORK (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur came with in the crook of a gunner's finger of never being the architect of victory in the Pacific war or the old soldier who faded slowly away.

On a chilly dawn 22 years ago the general, together with his wife and son, came breath-takingly close to being shot by U.S.

machine guns.
The time was daybreak on March 13, 1942. The place was a solitary stretch of sea somewhere between Corregidor and the island of Quiluban in the Phillipines.

Ordered to Leave
The story began when President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered MacArthur, together with many of his top staff officers, to abandon the besieged Phillipines and take up command of all Allied forces in the Pacific with headquarters in Australia. No air transport was available. The last U.S. planes in the Phillipines had long since fallen to Japanese gunners.

The island fortress of Corregidor, then MacArthur's last stronghold, was under constant artillery fire from Japanese forces on Bataan. Submarines could reach the island only by hazardous passage through mine fields at night.

Gen. MacArthur considered a submarine escape, then elected to leave aboard the plywood torpedo boats of Lt. John D. Bulkeley, now an admiral commanding U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo, Cuba. I was a radio man aboard the PT32, one of four boats in Bulkeley's squadron to survive the first three months of World War II.

Wife and Son
Gen. MacArthur, his wife and son boarded Lt. Bulkeley's boat, the PT41, after dusk on March 12. Other officers of his staff were divided among the other boats. Four major generals were assigned to the PT32.

Our mission was to carry the party to Mindanao, in the southern Phillipines, where it would be met by planes from Australia.

It was a journey of 700 miles through seas ruled by the Japanese navy. Our plan was to run by night, hide by day among the countless small islands along the way. With luck we would reach Mindanao on the third night.

The PT32 lost its luck less than an hour after leaving Corregidor. First one and then two of the boat's three engines coughed and died. Suddenly we were still in the dark sea and the other boats roared out of sight.

The trouble was contaminated gasoline. This had plagued the squadron since the war began, and the engineers knew what had to be done. But cleaning the carburetors required nearly an hour, and then it took two hours at full throttle before we picked up the other boats of the formation.

Engines Fail
But for only an hour. Then the PT32's engines failed, and again we were left behind. The carburetors were cleaned and again we took up the pursuit of the other boats. Hours passed, and dawn began to lighten the sky.

Suddenly a lookout picked up a white spot on the horizon behind the PT32. A small vessel with what looked like two small gun turrets on the bow was gaining rapidly on the PT32.

Battle Stations
The PT32 crew took battle stations. The generals from Corregidor were awakened and rushed on deck. The young ensign commanding the PT32 pushed the throttle wide and headed for the cover of a small island far ahead on the horizon. But the pursuing craft was faster. The skipper of the PT32 sought desperately to increase his speed. Strapped to the fore-deck of the 70-foot craft were a dozen steel drums of gasoline. They were essential to complete the journey to Mindanao. But unless they were abandoned the boat might never survive the hour. The boat commander snatched orders and we threw the gasoline into the sea.

But the PT32 was still too slow. Relentlessly, the pursuer closed the gap.
"Stand by to commence firing!" the PT32 commander snapped. Gunners in the boat's two machine turrets trained tensely on target. One word and the firing would begin.

"Wait!" shouted the executive officer of the PT32, who was staring through binoculars at the craft astern. "Did the PT41 load gasoline drums on her bow?"

"Yes!" a machinist replied instantly. "I saw them put there just before they left for Corregidor to pick up the general!"

Race Continued
The race continued for minutes before the executive officer, still staring through binoculars, shouted: "It is the PT41. Those things on the bow are not gun turrets but gasoline drums."

The PT32 slowed and the other boat came up quickly. As the gap narrowed Lt. Bulkeley shouted through a megaphone, "What the hell are you people doing up there?" his voice shook with anger.

In the cockpit of the PT41 beside Bulkeley was a tall, familiar figure in a sloped military cap, corncob pipe in his mouth. MacArthur said nothing as Bulkeley upbraided the PT32 commander.

All four boats had suffered engine trouble and the formation became separated in the night. The PT32 somehow bypassed the PT41. When the PT41 appeared from an unexpected direction in the dawn it was taken as an enemy. The gasoline drums strapped to its bow had given the boat's outline and changed its alien appearance.

The PT32 could not recover its gasoline and without the fuel we could not complete the trip. The four generals were transferred to the PT41. We were left behind, later to be rescued by a submarine, as the MacArthur party roared into history.

Always Colorful Soldier

EDITOR'S NOTE — The following article is by an Associated Press correspondent who served with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and who recalls his experiences with the general.

By YATES MC DANIEL, Associated Press Writer
The first time I saw Douglas MacArthur was on a Shanghai, China, dockside when the Army commander in the Phillipines was on his way to Washington to become chief of staff.

Among the last times, was many years later, also in Washington. On that spring night, political notables broke in like schoolboys through a military cordon to greet and grasp the hand of the aging soldier to whose summary dismissal they had assented.

Disarmament was in vogue in 1930, the first time. War had been renounced by treaty. Yet this unsmiling general, using language that sounded as if it came from an early Victorian to be abandoned to the Japanese.

Seeming to ignore his hosts, the general picked up the threats of the 1930 conversation as if it had ended only minutes earlier. Rapidly jumping to the vital importance of the Phillipines, then nearing its hour of doom, MacArthur envisioned Australia as the base for the great offensive.

Prime Minister John Curtin picked up his ears. The general's voice dropped to a whisper that could be heard through the hall: "Mr. Prime Minister, we will not defend your country here. The battle for Australia shall be fought in New Guinea."

The general was expected to appear in Melbourne to say a word about the fall of Bataan in April 1942. He failed to appear, but sent a note, on paper torn from a child's pad. The note said the Bataan force "went out as it would have wished, fighting to the end of its flickering forlorn hope."

The surrender of Corregidor and all American forces in the Phillipines a few weeks later jolted MacArthur from his seclusion.

His dark eyes darkened. His nostrils quivered.

"They can't," he said. "They have no right to do that. I gave no order to surrender. I am still commanding in the Phillipines."

The anger faded. The voice grew almost gentle as he turned to look through a window: "Corregidor needs no comment from me. It has sounded its own story at the mouth of its guns. I shall always seem to see a vision of grim, gaunt, ghastly men, still unafraid."

Japs Surrender To MacArthur

EDITOR'S NOTE—This article on General of the Army Douglas MacArthur is by an Associated Press staff writer who as a war correspondent covered his campaign in the Pacific. Murlin Spencer, author of this story, is now bureau chief in Seattle.

By MURLIN SPENCER
SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur turned in one of his finest performances in Tokyo Bay on Sept. 2, 1945.

The Navy had furnished a multimillion-dollar platform, the battleship Missouri. The green hills of Japan's bomb-shattered main island formed the backdrop. Japan provided the villains — reluctant leaders of its military and foreign services ordered to accept terms of surrender.

But MacArthur, at 65 a handsome, imposing figure, held the center of the interest for all of the nearly 30 minutes the program was under way. There were other figures on stage for brief moments, but it was MacArthur's show just as the war in the Southwest Pacific was generally considered in the public mind to have been MacArthur's war.

Always General
He was always every inch the general. Whether in khaki or in olive green; whether on a landing beach or at headquarters, he was always immaculate and he was always in charge.

But in that comparatively brief period aboard the Missouri he was at his spectacular best. He was the Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers. He was stern, dignified and he in no way attempted to humiliate his conquered foe. Instead, he said:

"It is my earnest hope, and indeed the hope of all mankind, that from this solemn occasion a better world shall emerge out of the blood and carnage of the past . . . a world founded upon faith and understanding . . . a world dedicated to the dignity of man and the fulfillment of his most cherished wish . . . for freedom, tolerance and justice."

At the conclusion of the ceremony, he turned from the microphone and departed from the ship to start his new assignment — to enforce the terms of the surrender.

General MacArthur took a gamble when he led American forces into Japan to take over the islands. He flew in by plane and after landing drove to his headquarters in Yokohama. I traveled virtually the same route, some hours later, and saw innumerable machine gun positions, all manned by Japanese soldiers, along the route.

But MacArthur led the way for a handful of armed men to move into a country in which an estimated 3 million of the enemy were still under arms.

MacArthur knew the oriental mind and he did not attempt to move immediately into Tokyo, the capital of the conquered nation. Only a short time before, fanatics had attempted by murder to prevent the broadcasting of the Emperor's order to cease fighting.

Time To Cool
MacArthur gave the city a time to cool a bit, and then moved quietly into the city with a small force from the 1st Cavalry Division. He went directly to the American embassy and there had the American flag raised for the first time.

MacArthur was there to stay. The occupation was not under way long before criticism arose from the United States and Australia. MacArthur had adopted a "soft policy" in handling the Japanese, his critics said.

Correspondents had wondered what his reaction would be when the criticism started. All during the war there had been no criticism of MacArthur. His critics, most fanatical devotion to their commander, would not have permitted criticism if a correspondent had wanted to voice it.

The general showed he could take criticism and reply softly. When censorship was lifted for Allied correspondents, and they were free to write what they pleased, there was little if any criticism leveled at the wartime acts of MacArthur. The barbs were tossed instead at his press relations officers.

MacArthur could be tough. The Japanese press, for many years a controlled press, went too far in their new-found freedom and began printing propaganda against the occupation forces.

Tight Censorship
MacArthur slapped them down with a tight censorship. He set up a code which emphasized truth in the news.

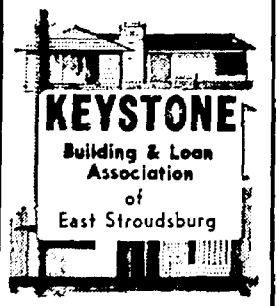

The Japanese had been used to stern treatment and MacArthur was stern.
